Nancy Randolph Davis
Nutritional Health Fair
Featuring State and Local Health Advocates

Monday, February 1, 2010
11:00 a.m to 2:00 p.m.
Student Union Ballroom, 265 Student Union

1st Breakout Session
Chef de Cuisine Marc Dunham and Erinn Tucker
Play With Your Food Demonstration
11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.
Sequoyah Room, 280 Student Union
Free Tasting

2nd Breakout Session
Dr. Solo Kuvibidila presents
Nutritional Health from a Global Perspective
12:40 p.m. to 1:30 p.m.
French Lounge, 270 Student Union

In 1949, Nancy Randolph Davis became the first black student to enroll at OSU, then Oklahoma A&M College. She earned her Master of Science degree from the College of Human Environmental Sciences in 1952, after which she taught home economics and child care at Star Spencer High School for 23 years. She retired from Oklahoma public education after 43 years of service.

In 1999, Davis was named a ‘Distinguished Alumna’ of OSU and, in 2001, the university named ‘Davis Hall’ one of its newest residence halls, after Nancy Randolph Davis. Three scholarships are offered at OSU in her name, as well. The Nancy Randolph Davis Scholarships for freshmen, continuing students and graduate students honor Davis’ efforts and commitment to education.

Davis has received numerous recognitions, honors and awards from state governors, legislature and various community service organizations. In December 2008, Davis received the Oklahoma Human Rights award. The Oklahoma Human Rights Commission honored her as an educational pioneer and human rights trailblazer. Most recently, she received the 2009 HES Enhancing Human Lives Award.